3. Focus on Learning: Lindsey Cox, iLab Teacher, presented information about the Rowland and Barr Foundation Grants. The presentation goal is to articulate what the Rowland Fellowship is, the work that is happening in Winooski and give a few pilot examples to understand potential future implications of the work. Lindsey gave an overview of her roles within the district-Rowland Fellow, ilab Teacher w/English endorsement and former Partnership for Change project manager. The Rowland Fellowship was developed to give support to teachers. The concept is the change that is happening in schools should happen from the inside. It allows a teacher or team of teachers time and space to do some design, research and development. Lindsey applied in 2016 and was accepted to receive the grant. The first year she was awarded $17K for release time for research and development, site visits and pilots. In year two (2019) the original grant dollars continue to support implementation, evaluation and upscale pilots. The Barr Foundation Grant was awarded to “develope a Wider Ecosystem for Learning.” There is a $225K source of funds to be awarded in the fall of 2017. It is a perfect alignment with the Rowland Foundation. In Winooski, the term “flexible pathways” – a learning experience that allows students to demonstrate proficiency towards graduation that happens outside of the regularly scheduled class. The system being designed has exposure, engagement, planning, support and assessment as the core components. All five pieces needs to occur in order for the flexible pathway learning experience to happen. What should a system of flexible pathways look like that supports students to demonstrate proficiency for learning that happens outside of the classes? During the teacher in-service 20 students joined teachers to tackle this question. Peace Jam, Bus Pilot, Hero Club, Rowland
Design Team and tutoring are groups that are working towards this goal. The potential impact at the board level are budget implications. The Rowland Grant and the Barr Grant will bring monies in for the next couple years. The future budget implications would be staffing, transportation, and insurance liability. In the spring, teachers and students will be conducting site visits to other schools that have also been awarded grants. Board members would like to have students present at a future board meeting of what they have learned from flexible pathways.
